The “Profession” means the fields of business concerned with the assessment of relevant requirements as per normative documents such as standards, technical specifications, client specific requirements, codes of practices and regulations including, but not limited to, sampling, testing, inspection, analysis, evaluation, verification, conformity assessment and certification. It also includes, amongst others, the provision of services facilitating trade as well as services required by governments to monitor and facilitate imports and exports.

2. Group membership

TIC Council has a group membership structure, which means that if your testing/inspection/certification business operates as a group of subsidiary or associated companies the group as a whole has to become the Member of TIC Council, subject to all group members meeting the membership criteria. In this case one company (usually the group holding company or principal operating company) is designated as the TIC Council member and represents the other group companies.
